

Seasonal Manifesto

When autumn winds blow I will turn the letting go into letting God.

I will recognize that all endings lead to new beginnings.

I will not be dictated by my soul but will direct my grief to Jesus.

I will trust in a God who fans the flame which sparks a fire of belief.

When winds of change threaten to shake me I will stand firm on His promises.

In winter seasons when I feel alone I will remember I am beloved.

I will practice mercy & grace toward my family and especially toward myself.

I will make times of loneliness opportunities to be alone with God.

I will be brave enough because God is always big enough.

I will praise the God who can handle all my sorrows.

I will release my anxieties and take hold of God's peace which surpasses understanding.

When spring is blooming I will grab onto shoots of hope.

I will plant my mustard seeds of faith in the soil of Resurrection.

I will return to the simplicity of Jesus when life gets complicated.

I will be a willing vessel where the Holy Spirit flows.

In summer seasons of my soul I will shine for Him to others.

I will be the brave face that gives someone wings to fight their battle.

I will remember that I live in God's Heavenly Kingdom here on earth through me.
